"We live in language like fish live in water." - Christina Hall

What would it be like if you could use your language to help your learners expand their thought processes, explore new options and reach their potential?

How would you feel if you could develop your communication skills such that the language you use in the classroom brings about effective change and memorable long-term learning?

Session Objectives

Provide teachers with innovative strategies to

- ✓ help teachers be more precise in their communication with their learners
- ✓ check that learners have understood what has been taught
- ✓ unblock learners' unresourceful thinking patterns and question their assumptions
- ✓ explore below the surface of communication and reconnect with experience
- ✓ challenge learners' limiting beliefs
- ✓ trigger positive change and open learners' minds to new options and possibilities
- ✓ give teachers and their learners more choices about how to act
- ✓ be a more effective, more adaptable and consequently more charismatic classroom communicator
